The basic goals are to familiarize the students to the structural and physical properties of proteins, nucleic acids, lipids and carbohydrates, as well as ligands/drugs that bind to these macromolecules in an effort to understand the functional role each plays in the biochemistry of medicinals and the normal and abnormal functioning of a cell. A particular emphasis is placed on the basic concepts that are central to structure-function relationships of therapeutics. Macromolecular classes are presented progressively from basic monomeric structural composition and structural diversity to macromolecular assemblies and associated intrinsic function to macromolecular involvement in cellular architecture and cellular processes to molecular
